J. R. RACE & CO.

To the Point.

Gen. John A. Logan in remarks to the Fourth Ward clubs in Chicago recently spoke pointedly of the responsibility of the Democrats for the war:

He pressed this point upon Judge Trumbull, who says the Democratic party helped to put down the rebellion if, when the first rebel flag was unfurled to the breeze, the Democratic party all over the North, in every Northern state, had assembled in meetings and declared that this Nation should be preserved, if it took the last dollar and the last man, there would have been no war. If, in the legislatures they controlled, the Democrats of the North had notified their brethren in the South that they could not make war without meeting them in every battlefield, there would have been no war. [Cheers.] The war continued four years because in the Northern States there was sympathy with rebellion; because that sympathy was so strong that the people of the South were encouraged to expect that the time would come when the Democratic party in the North would force the Republican party to stop the war and allow them to go in peace. If the people who were disseminating disease in the North could have been captured and hanged, if people in Chicago who were gathering shot guns and pistols and making cartridges here in your city in order to turn loose prisoners and burn your town—had they turned their power the other way and encouraged the people to put down the rebellion; had people in New York who were about to attempt the same thing, and in Indiana, and all over the country instead of obstructing the war, insisted that the whole power of the government should be enforced like a mighty engine against secession, the war would have stopped much sooner than it did. [Cheers.] Not only that, but when they say we are not entitled to credit for putting down the rebellion he would point to the legislation of the country, show a single law passed by congress for the purpose of raising money, regaining our credit, or putting down the rebellion that had the assent of the Democratic party in Congress. The war cost us in round numbers $600,000,000, of which we have paid four thousand million, and $2,000,000,000 remain in interest-bearing and non-interest-bearing debt. If the Democratic party had done what they should have done, you would not have had to pay $4,000,000,000, and still be in debt $2,000,000,000, and Democrats wouldn't be going around the country criticising the Republican party for its expenditures of public money, which was made because of the Democratic party, and not of the Republican party. [Cheers.]

They meet with a badly demoralized force.

The Democrat who claims that there is any good prospect of Hancock's success in November is either dishonest in what he says, or ignorant upon the subject on which he talks. No intelligent Democrat believes now that his party has any chance to win. All talk of that kind is mere bluster.

A GENTLEMAN in this city yesterday received a business letter from a very extensive manufacturing firm in one of the New England States, which contained the following postscript: "Orders continue to come in, and with the present election prospects we anticipate more work than ever heretofore."

You can always tell when a good Republican speech is made in Decatur—the Review is sure to howl the next morning. From the amount of attention it gives to Gen. Russell this morning the conclusion is irresistible that somebody got hurt. It's always that way.

Greene and Wade Hampton divide between them now, in about equal proportion, the attention of the Democratic bosses. What little breath they have left, after cursing Grant for pushing the Hancock bubble, they expend on berating the statesman whose address is Columbia, South Carolina, and bewailing the fact that the made didn't break his neck instead of his leg.

The Review, in its report of General Russell's speech, says: "the more such speeches we have here the better it will be for democracy." That reminds us of what the rebel papers said when Sherman was making his famous march to the sea. "Just let him go, Joe Johnston is getting him exactly where he wants him." But we never learned that it did Joe any good when he got to Savannah where he wanted him. The principal play achieved in that campaign, as a matter of fact, did not belong to Johnston, but to Sherman, and if the Democracy cannot count on the support of the skunking given them by General Russell, they are welcome to it. They manage to extract satisfaction out of the most disastrous happenings, just now, and I would doubtless be, really, at their own funeral, so that we would not have the heart to interfere with their melancholy pleasures. Let them have all the fun they can get.

GEN. RUSSELL.

The speech of this gentleman at the table last night was one of the most notable events of the campaign in Decatur. It is not often that our people have an opportunity of hearing a native southern Republican—one who has been through the terrible scenes which have marked the history of reconstruction. Gen. Russell is a living witness of the horrible atrocities committed in the name of Democracy, and he tells of them in language whose plainness and directness cannot be mistaken. His speeches throughout the northern states cannot fail to have a good effect in directing the attention of the people to the true state of affairs in that half of the country which is solidly Democratic.

Is not a friend.
Are two of the best hard-headed business men in the market. St.
Sept 17 dwt. A. M. & A. M.

The Review is still troubled lest Democrats may sell their votes at the coming election, and it speaks of some party having a thousand dollars to spend in Decatur on election day. If the editor of the Review really believes what his party professes with regard to the influence of money on election day, namely, that Democrats are induced to vote the Republican ticket by corrupt means, and if he believes that the Republicans have a thousand dollars to spend in this way, then we do not wonder that he is scared and disheartened. If Democrats sell their votes habitually, as the authorities and organs of that party claim after every defeat, a thousand dollars judiciously expended would be enough to wipe out a very big proportion of the Democratic vote of Decatur and transfer it to the other side of the ledger. The Review sees the handwriting upon the wall, and is getting ready for the defeat that it knows is coming. Its editor wants a soft place to light, and he naturally turns to the spot on which so many weary Democratic apologists have found sweet repose in the past—on the claim of bribery.

The New York Sun continues to show signs of disgruntlement. In its issue of yesterday it says:

Much as our candidate excels in writing letters, we most differentially advise him not to write any more. But if he does write any, let him enclose them with a $10 bill in a transparent envelope, and the Republican subordinates in the post office of this city will be sure to break them open, steal the money and destroy the letter, so that they will never see the light. General Hancock need write nothing more on the tariff. Every one knows he is in favor of a tariff which will yield the most protection to American industries, and especially to the Democratic party. Gen. Hancock should devote himself to writing his inaugural, and even if it never be delivered, the preparation of it will be a salutary literary exertion. But if he must write on a tariff, let him explicitly state that if it had been left to him he would have put a prohibitory tariff on the readmission of unrepentant rebels to citizens' rights after the close of the war. That is about the only letter on the tariff we can conceive of that would help him. Unless he is going to write some such letter, let him return his goose-quill to the original goose.

Is it true, as the Review intimates, that the Democratic voters of Decatur are for sale? Are their votes in the market, to be disposed of to the highest bidder? No Republican ever made this charge, but the organ does, by implication at least.

A Sketch of Lucy Stone.

Mrs. Stone's first appearance as a public speaker was at her brother's church in Gardiner, Mass., in 1837. As the sister of her pastor, she was received with what might be termed polite curiosity. The audience listened and wondered.

"In those days," said Mrs. Stone, "we did not talk about women's suffrage, but we called it a woman's rights. We had first to prove that a woman had any rights before we could specify the distinctive one of the ballot."

For a short time after her marriage Mrs. Stone lived at Walnut Hills, a suburb of Cincinnati, and an old house is now often pointed out to the stranger as the house where Mrs. Stone and where Lucy Stone lived. The father of Mr. Blackwell settled at Walnut Hills on his arrival from England with his family, and proceeded to establish a new industry in procuring sugar from beets. This was somewhere in the decade between 1835-45, when the abolition movement was first agitating the land, and it was the tidal wave as it reached England that induced Mr. Blackwell to establish this industry on American soil, and put it in such competition with slave labor that he would monopolize the trade and drive the slave labor from the field.

A Good Retort.

While Mr. Greeley stood in the gallery of the Louvre, before the war, admiring the pictures he said in answer to somebody's remark, "Yes, I know it; but I tell you what we want in America is a good looking." A bystander, and Englishman, said, "Yes, sir, that is precisely what you do need." The Englishman waited for a retort; but Mr. Greeley stood looking at his catalogue as though he had heard nothing. At length he said: "Yes, what we need is a damned good looking, but the difficulty is, there is no nation on earth that can lick us."

To Hon. Wade Hampton: When you spoke of the Republican press of this country as infamous and unreliable you lied, said, and, by God, said, you knew you lied, said. Our address is Fourth and Pine, St. Louis, and our subscription price is five cents for single copies, said.

How many soldier votes did Hancock get in Ohio and Indiana besides those which Tilden or Bayard would have got? Right after the Cincinnati Convention we were told that the soldier vote would go over in a body to the Superb.

Wade Hampton has now had a row with each of the Sheridans, and we would like his opinion as to which one of them he prefers to tackle—John or Tecumseh. In his case they have both proved to be tough customers.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Cincinnati Enquirer, for a democratic organ, tells a tough one on English. The other day a Mr. Macaulay called upon the wife of the Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks, and as he entered her presence said:

"Mrs. Hendricks, I have just been calling on one of the most distinguished gentlemen of your state."

"Who is that, pray?" inquired the lady.
"Mr. English."
"Great Heavens!" she exclaimed, "you don't call Phil English a gentleman?"

LYMAN TRUMBULL—THINGS NOT DENIED.

Springfield Journal.

Because Republicans treat its idle vapors with contempt, the Register, of this city, with characteristic impudence and effrontery, is accustomed to characterize its silly assertions as "not denied." We propose herewith to enumerate several facts in the history of Lyman Trumbull, which are not only "not denied," which are capable of proof.

"It is not denied" that Lyman Trumbull, though a native of Connecticut, began his career in Georgia as a nullifier. [For proof see Ottawa speech of Stephen A. Douglas, 1858.]

"It is not denied" that in the Illinois House of Representatives he favored repudiation of the State debt. [See speech of Senator Douglas, Ford's History of Illinois and House Journals.]

"It is not denied" that he opposed the construction of the Illinois and Michigan Canal, and, according to Ford, "came near defeating it." [See Ford's History and House Journals.]

"It is not denied" that Ford declared him "no statesman," but "literally deceived by ambition for office." [See Ford's History.]

"It is not denied" that in 1855 Trumbull received the vote of Know-Nothings in the Illinois Legislature for United States Senator, and by their persistence in his support, secured his election over Abraham Lincoln.

"It is not denied" that Lyman Trumbull is at least the reputed author of the "Civil Rights Bill," and as Chairman of the Senate Committee, reported all the Reconstruction measures, declared by the Democratic party in its platform of 1868, "unconstitutional, unconstitutional, revolutionary and void."

"It is not denied" that in 1871 he declared that "the Democratic party has never done an act that would commend it to the favorable consideration of the people," and that it has ever "been a standing menace to the progress and civilization of the nineteenth century."

"It is not denied" that he declared the Democratic party "a body of men mostly traitors," who "must be ignored and spurned," if they presented themselves at the Cincinnati Convention.

"It is not denied" that he is now begging the same party to elect him Governor of this State.

"It is not denied" that he voted while in Congress against welcoming to the American shores, the Irish patriots recently released from English prisons, and that Shelby M. Callow voted to accord them a generous reception.

"It is not denied" that he refused to participate in the Parnell meeting at Chicago a few months ago.

"It is not denied" that he exacted and received from the Government a fee of $10,000 for arguing the McArde case in the Supreme Court of the United States while a member of the United States Senate, in direct violation of law.

These are a few of the things in reference to Lyman Trumbull which his obsequious organs "dare not deny," and the large majority of which are matter of documentary proof accessible to all.

English has been in favor of "revenue only" for a good many years. He gets it by high interest, sheriff's sales and foreclosures.

The bold Democracy braves up and says: "Who's afraid?" You are, gentlemen. You're afraid of your own platform.

The only "change" to be desired is a change of heart among the Democrats. Happily, many of them are becoming converted, too.

Was there ever a presidential candidate who was obliged to write so many explanatory letters as Hancock has written? There certainly has been none who could show with more startling clearness that he has no more idea of public questions than a baby has of trigonometry.

The tariff issue seems to worry the Democrats. They ought to be able to see that they will not strengthen the workmen's faith in a new pledge by such reckless haste to break an old and more formal one.

I have suffered from a kidney difficulty for the past ten years, accompanied with nervous spasms. Physicians gave me but temporary relief, but after using three and one-half bottles of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, my nervous system was entirely relieved. My age is 77 years. I recommend this great remedy to all suffering from nervous trouble.

BLOOMINGTON, October 20.—The Republican rally held here to-day proved to be the grandest success, as well as one of the most enthusiastic political gatherings ever held in Central Illinois. The city began filling at an early hour in the morning, the trains on all the different roads bringing large delegations from the towns of McLean and all adjoining counties in Central Illinois. At 11 o'clock the crowd was estimated to be between 35,000 and 40,000 people. Among the largest delegations were those from Logan and Ford counties, the former sending between 1,100 and 1,200. The greater number of this delegation were in uniform and under the command of Col. R. B. Latham, of Lincoln.

The parade which began forming at 10 o'clock, was one of the largest ever witnessed in this part of the State, the length being between four and five miles. In addition to the uniformed delegations from different towns, the business houses and manufacturers of Bloomington, Normal and Pekin made an elegant display of goods, machinery, etc. The procession reached the Fair Grounds at 12:30. The speaking was announced to take place at half past one o'clock. The Fair Grounds were crowded with one of the largest gatherings ever seen at a political demonstration held in McLean county. Over 15,000 people were in attendance. Two stands were erected. Gen. Logan addressed over 10,000 people from one, Hon. D. C. Smith and P. W. Wilcox, the Mendota carpenter, speaking from the other. The city was beautifully decorated, the business houses and private residences being decked with flags and evergreens, which made the scene one of striking beauty, and an occasion not soon to be forgotten. At 5 p. m. the St. Louis Arsenal band gave a concert in the Court House Square, listened to by thousands.

The torchlight procession in the evening was a grand sight, the line being filled with mounted horsemen, uniformed infantry, brass and martial bands. The leading feature was the linen duster and straw hat brigade, composed of the best young men of the city, numbering 100. The number in line by actual count was nearly 8,000. The city was ablaze with illumination. Business houses and residences were illuminated in a handsome and brilliant manner. The display of fireworks was made from the procession and added to the brilliancy of the red light burning in every street, and made the scene one of the most noted in political history in this part of the State. Nothing occurred in the way of serious accidents during the day or night processions.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—An immense gathering of Republicans greeted Emory A. Storrs, of Chicago, in Cooper Union to-night. The meeting was presided over by Joseph A. Choate, who spoke for half an hour sketching the issues of the campaign. After he had been speaking for a few minutes Gen. Grant appeared at the back of the platform with E. W. Stoughton, ex-Minister to Russia. He had not been announced to be present, and his appearance was a surprise to all. He was instantly recognized, and the audience rose to its feet. The scene which followed has seldom been equalled in New York. It was as if a pandemonium had been let loose. The cheering was of the wildest character, and the greeting was such as to make the blood tingle. He was conducted to the chairman's seat and stood in front of it bowing his acknowledgments. In the halls the enthusiasm cheers were given for "306," "the old guard" and "our candidate in 1884." Gen. Grant at last advanced to the front of the platform and when silence was secured, said:

Ladies and gentlemen, I tried my very best to slip in here quietly without being seen [laughter and renewed applause, and cheers], in hopes of hearing something that would assure me that the right thing for me to do was to be a Republican in this canvass. [Cheers.] I was not quite certain but that between this and the 2nd of November I might have a spinal column of the sort I heard one of your speakers tell of; that is a caterpillar's column, which was of a kind he did not approve of in Republicans. [Great laughter.] I was sure after hearing Mr. Choate and Mr. Storrs I would require no stiffening of my spinal column and would go away even a better Republican than when I came. If you excuse me now so that we may listen to them, I am sure you will all go away with the same politics which they will preach and which I believe in. Tumultuous applause.

Mr. Storrs was introduced a few moments later and was warmly received. He was in his happiest vein, and his speech was received with marked approbation. He created intense amusement by his reading and commenting on Hancock's interview and letters. His speech was not, he said, a review of the record of the Democratic party, because life was too short to enter fully upon it, but he selected the pinnacles of its blunders and skipped from one to another.

The meeting adopted a resolution of thanks to Mr. Storrs and broke up with cheers for Gen. Grant and the Republican party. Grant remained on the platform for a few minutes, and there was a rush to shake him by the hand. Finally he escaped by a side door, leaving the building, as he had entered it, unobserved.
